Question 11

N/A

My mentor answered my questions and checked in on me from time to time. The whole social studies department took me under their wings.

teachers in the district participate. The program is a year long program with a teaching mentor and adviser. During the year, I attended professional development courses once a month where we furthered our education through teaching and peer support. While teaching in our own classrooms, we were observed by our adviser who scored us based on the standards our corporation follows four times throughout the semester. At the end of the first year, I passed my course based on a rubric and the decision of my advisers. Informally, my second year, I have been in an all kindergarten campus. I have been able to work with my co-workers to continue to show growth as a teacher in my classroom.

The corporation provided group meetings for first year teachers for mentoring and professional development. In addition to my first-year mentor teacher, I have also sought the counsel of our corporation's intermediate school literacy coach. This individual has advised me on such topics as curriculum, assessment, and classroom

N/A

I have an evaluator who observes 8 classes a year; a collaborating instructional assistant at both Carroll High and Maple Creek with whom I work closely; I'm a part of the World Language Department Team for collaboration on Wednesday mornings. The ENL team also meets together every month.

N/A

As a first year teacher at ACSC all first year teachers are required to pass their PAR program, in which they are observed and evaluated once a month. I graduated from the PAR program with no problems.

N/A

I collaborated on a weekly basis with not only my mentor, but also with teachers of other disciplines to further my understanding of and to contribute to the teaching profession.

N/A

I often sought or received mentoring from other experienced teachers on staff.

I met with my mentor teacher each week to plan for following week in my first year of teaching. She shared resources with me and helped me to develop my classroom schedule and curriculum. In my second year of teaching first grade, she continued to provide advice and training that helped me become a better teacher.
