Question 11

I am constantly working with the two high school counselors and being mentored by them. They have both been in this profession for many years and are more than willing to teach and mentor me when I need it. my grade level has weekly meetings and many informal conversations throughout the days and weeks about practices, strategies, plans, etc. Our staff is very team-oriented so I have felt mentored by many of them, not just my own grade level team.

All of the teachers and administrators here have been excellent in providing mentor-like advice. It has been easy to ask questions and discuss my experience with any professional in the building.

teach model lessons in my room, watch me teach and give feedback, or take me on "walk-alongs" where we would observe other teachers together. Additionally, I used my grade level teammates as informal mentors, and went to them frequently for advice or support.

Weekly planning with instructional coach during 2014-2015 school year. Weekly discussions with team including Special Education teacher in order to best plan for all students.

N/A

In my second year, we began a teacher mentor program that I was apart of. I was lucky enough to have another terrific teacher in which mentored and helped me in my first two years of teaching.

Our school district enrolled me in the Indiana New Administrator Leadership Institute (INALI), which paired me helped me with ordering and purchasing equipment through the Science Department Budget. My mentor teacher also helped me with discipline and classroom procedures both in general and specific to our schools needs.

I am currently an administrator. Throughout the year, my principal and I have been meeting on a weekly basis to provide feedback on my next steps for improvement. The feedback and next steps are often connected to the RISE Rubric for administrators and the leadership rubric from Learning Forward.

Daily informal PLC meetings; Monthly formal PLC meetings

I am serving as an assistant principal. My principal acts as my mentor.

I met with the superintendent and other teachers new to the district four times a year. Additionally, I worked closely with a few other experienced teachers who served as mentor teachers to me.

I have received mentoring from my principal, fellow K-1 teammates, other colleagues, and the literacy specialist in our building. They have helped me with my classroom environment, behavior management, and academic planning. I also work closely with Butler professors who support my teaching.
