Instructional Coaches were available for any questions.

I worked closely with my coworker who works in the same grade. She helped me at the beginning of the year. Showing me her lesson plans and management skills she has used in the past. Since then we compare how we are doing throughout the year and what I might need to change or improve on.

principle would meet with me after each observation to give helpful insight. Beginning teachers would communicate quarterly with the principle to share ideas and established classroom procedures with each other. The most helpful mentoring strategy I received is observing other classrooms in the building to better myself as a teacher. Milan Elementary has been very supportive in providing me with tools and materials as a beginning teacher, as well as, a team setting that I enjoy being a part of.

I worked closely with other special educators and experienced teachers on the staff.

Mr. Andy Allen, my administrator, evaluated and conferenced with me about any improvements I could make in the classroom and what I was doing well.

worked very closely with an experienced teacher. We planned and programmed together weekly. In our Early Childhood program I also work closely with school psychologists and therapists who I have met with and planned with on a regular basis.

During my teaching experiences at Clifty Creek Elementary and Van Buren Elementary, I was fortunate to work with mentor teachers with a minimum of five years experience. They supported me in every way during my first
